Noise from neighbours might come in many different forms, from loud arguments, or noisy pets, to the heavy sounds of music from a stereo system or all-night parties. Those who have experienced trouble with noisy neighbours say that these are particularly difficult to cope with. Noise at night has a heavier impact, as it can trouble you at a time when you need to rest.

4.2. _

Too much noise is no joke. It distracts people from enjoying doing simple things, such as watching TV, reading, or chatting to members of the family. It gets even worse if you have to study or work at home. Although it will not happen overnight, it can cause you to become irritable and unable to cope with the stresses of everyday life. Worse still, having to listen to high levels of noise for a long period of time might result in serious health problems, including insomnia.

4.3. _

One obvious way of dealing with the problem would be to try to persuade the troublesome neighbour to change their ways. However, some surveys have shown that nowadays, the majority of those troubled by noise from neighbours choose to resolve the matter on formal grounds rather than by face-to-face contact. To avoid threats, offensive language, or even direct violence from the noise-makers, people now most often make a formal complaint, either to the police or the housing administration.

4.4. _

When asked for advice on this matter, the police stress the issue of safety and recommend avoiding direct action. They also warn against recording the noise, as this could be seen as a violation of the neighbours' privacy, and might well end up in a court of law. This isn't quite the same as suggestions from housing associations, which insist that residents first try to deal with the problem on their own and not take any legal action unless absolutely necessary.

Mark and I were talking outside school when we saw a boy coming towards us. 'That's Tony!' Mark told me, 'the captain of the school football team. We went to primary school together but ...' I knew what he meant. Tony was one of the most popular boys at school, while Mark was far from that. As for me, I'd only been at this school for a few weeks and was still an outsider for many students. Tony came over to us.

'Hi, I'm Tony', he said. 'You're Adam, right?'

'Look, sorry about making fun of you in the canteen last week', Tony went on.

'No problem', I said.

'Look, Adam, I was thinking ... Maybe you'd like to join our football team?'

I was surprised. 'Why? I thought you had enough players.'

Many of us don't pay enough attention to our health and that is why we should make the best use we can of local sporting facilities. There are opportunities to join teams to play different sports or just have a gentle swim when we feel like it. Exercise is the key to fitness and we shouldn't avoid it just because we are short of time. It's popular to have an exercise bike or rowing machine at home these days but statistics show that it's easier to keep to a fitness routine if we go out and join other people. So, get up and join a centre. You won't regret it.
